

Gentlemen, I would like to express my opinion in favor of eliminating the Morse Code examination. I have been an amateur operator for over 3 years now, and have passed both General, and Extra written exams, but, because I do not have any desire on my part to use or learn Morse Code, since it seems to be an outdated form of communication, I have not continued. I feel amateur radio would be opened up to many people with the same feelings as mine if the Morse test were not a factor.

Thank You,

Michael Rogers
